Pastor’s Corner: Loving God Through Painful Times - The Hope Line

Just like love for others, love for God isn’t dependent on how you feel. Loving God is both the daily decision you make to stay faithful and the actions you take to keep your relationship with God strong.

These acts of love for God will help build your faith during difficult times, even when warm, calm feelings are hard to come by.

- Prayer: Praying is our way of communicating with God. Why stop talking to Him when we need Him most? Even if it’s for a short time, praying each day will help you ground yourself in your faith when times are hard. You can be 100 percent honest with God about how you feel, and how you need His help to heal a broken heart.
- Worship: Whether you worship alone or in a faith community, praising God for the things He has given you is a big help when it comes to shifting your perspective. I find gratitude is one of the surest ways to rediscover hope when I’m hurting.
- Reading Scripture: Reading encouraging Bible verses is a great way to find solace in your faith during a heartbreaking time.

Blessings,
Pastor Marveen Gentillon
