Pastor's Corner:

As we prepare for communion, I want us to sit back and contemplate what this means for us as believers, especially the words of Christ on the cross – “It is finished”.

In the profound silence that followed the agony of the crucifixion, Jesus uttered words that reverberate through the ages: “It is finished” (John 19:30). These three words encapsulate the culmination of God's redemptive plan, the ultimate sacrifice for humanity's sins.

In these words, “It is finished,” we find the ultimate assurance of our salvation. We no longer strive in vain, for Christ has accomplished what we could not. Our communion with Him rests not on our efforts, but on His finished work. Ellen White beautifully emphasizes this truth, stating, “Jesus died for you because He loved you. He finished the work He came to do. He made a full atonement for all your sins. And now, sinner, will you accept the offering? Will you believe that Jesus has healed you and will save you?” (Ellen G. White, Steps to Christ, p. 51).

Friends, communion becomes a sacred act of remembrance, not just of Christ's sacrifice, but of the victory He secured. It is a celebration of grace, an acknowledgment that in Christ, we are complete. As we partake in communion today, let us do so with hearts full of gratitude, embracing the reality that through Christ, our striving ceases, as we find rest in Him. And so, the finished work of the cross invites us to a table where we commune not just with bread and wine, but with the profound love of a Savior who declared, “It is finished,” so we might find eternal life in Him.

Blessings, Pastor Vernon
